

Friday 10th November 2023

Today, every class watched a webinar about Remembrance performed by Historical Workshops.

After this our service children went around the school educating the classes on the role of the armed forces. They explained that the forces consist of the navy who protect the sea, the army that protect the land and the RAF that protect the skies.

They talked about the varied roles of their parents including helicopter engineers, survival equipment management, fire safety, trainee education and supporting service people who are injured physically and mentally.

They also explained how their parent's jobs impacted on their lives.

"At times it feels as though we don't have a mum or dad because they have been posted away for too long. When they are on a ship we can't see or contact them. This is really hard. However they are allowed to take photos of themselves but its not the same. When they come home it's like the missing piece of the puzzle is in its right place and the world has been put back together again. We are so proud of the work our parents do to keep peace and keep the nation safe".
